DEFENDANTS' REPLY IN SUPPORT OF ADMINISTRATIVE
MOTION TO SET HEARING
DATES FOR MOTIONS TO DISMISS

[Civ. L.R. 7-11, Dkts. 89-91, 106]

Courtroom: 6, 17th Floor
Judge: Hon. Vaughn R. Walker

1 I. INTRODUCTION.

2 By this administrative motion (Dkts. 89-91), Defendants ask that the motions to
3 dismiss (Dkts. 79-81, 82, 86-88) be heard before Plaintiffs’ motion for preliminary injunction
4 (Dkts. 16-22, 28-36). Plaintiffs oppose that request, arguing that they filed their motion first
5 and therefore ought to be heard first. Dkt. 106. That sort of playground logic should be 6 afforded little weight. It is inconsistent with the government’s recent statement that it will
7 invoke the military and state secrets privilege. Dkt. 82. It is inconsistent with Plaintiffs’ own
8 requests to compel discovery they say they need for the preliminary injunction motion. Dkt.
9 94. And it would deny Defendants a fair hearing on the preliminary injunction motion.

10 Plaintiffs also argue that the hearing on the government’s forthcoming motion to 11 dismiss on state-secrets grounds (“Government Motion”) should be set so as to afford them the 12 full 35 days contemplated by Civ. L. R. 7-2(a). That point may have more merit but 13 nonetheless does not justify the schedule that Plaintiffs seek. The proper approach is this:

14 Step 1: Decide the Government Motion and Defendants’ motions to dismiss. If they 15 are granted, the case is over. The Court has already reserved June 21 for this case. Therefore,
16 Defendants suggest June 21 for the hearing on these motions.

17 Step 2: If the motions to dismiss are denied, then decide whether to allow the 18 discovery Plaintiffs want for the preliminary injunction motion. The Court cannot decide
19 whether to allow discovery until it decides whether the state-secrets privilege should bar
20 discovery or end the case. If discovery is allowed, the parties need to complete it before, not 21 after, briefing on the preliminary injunction motion if it truly “address[es] only issues raised by 22 the preliminary injunction motion,” as Plaintiffs say. Dkt. 94, at 1.

23 Step 3: Then decide the preliminary injunction motion. This too cannot occur before a 24 ruling on the motions to dismiss, including the Government Motion. (If it does, Defendants—
25 and presumably the government, which will seek intervention—cannot respond to most of the 26 factual assertions that motion makes.) And—if Plaintiffs are to be believed—it should occur
27 after a ruling on whether Plaintiffs get the discovery they want.

28 This plan makes sense. Plaintiffs’ plan does not.

1 II. ARGUMENT.

2 A. The legal issues raised by the Government Motion and Defendants’ motions to
3 dismiss must be addressed before reaching the factual issues posed by Plaintiffs’
4 preliminary injunction motion.

5 Defendants’ moving papers explain why, as a matter of law, their immunity and 6 standing defenses should be resolved first, before reaching the fact issues posed by Plaintiffs’
7 preliminary injunction motion. Dkt. 89, at 2:7-17; Dkt. 86, at 7:3-10:21, 19:1-24:12.
8 Plaintiffs’ opposition offers no response to these points beyond arguing that they ought to go
9 first because they filed first. With all due respect, the questions of immunity and Article III
10 standing posed by Defendants’ motion have greater claim to prompt resolution than does the 11 point that Plaintiffs have stood longer in the queue. While Plaintiffs argue that they too 12 champion important interests, those interests cannot be considered until the questions of 13 immunity and standing have been decided. An Article III court cannot issue an injunction if,
14 for example, plaintiffs lack standing. That is hornbook law.

15 The Government Motion has an even greater claim for prompt resolution. It too
16 addresses a threshold legal issue that could result in dismissal of the entire action.

17 Plaintiffs correctly observe that the military and state secrets privilege is a privilege.
18 Dkt. 106, at 3:6-13. But then they treat it as if it were a deposition objection to relevance or 19 form—something that can safely be put aside for another day. Not so. The government
20 contends that the very subject matter of the action is a state secret and thus requires dismissal
21 of the entire action. Dkt. 82, at 4:11-17 (citing Kasza v. Browner, 133 F.3d 1159, 1166 (9th
22 Cir. 1998)). That must be determined at the threshold, lest further proceedings in the case
23 “forc[e] a disclosure of the very thing the privilege is design to protect.” United States v.
24 Reynolds, 345 U.S. 1, 8 (1953). No matter how long others have stood in the queue, the 25 government’s invocation of the state secrets privilege moves it to the head.

1 B. Defendants cannot respond to the motion for preliminary injunction or Plaintiffs’
2 discovery until the Government Motion is resolved.

3 Plaintiffs’ preliminary injunction motion raises factual issues covered by the 4 Government Motion. Therefore, Defendants cannot address these factual allegations until 5 Defendants know whether doing so would be lawful. It would not be fair to Defendants (and 6 indeed could be deemed a denial of due process) to force them to defend themselves, not
7 knowing whether they can even speak to the allegations against them. The state secrets
8 privilege is designed precisely to avoid such a state of affairs. When government secrecy
9 prevents a defendant from defending himself, the state secrets privilege holds that the case
10 against that defendant must be dismissed. Kasza, 133 F.3d at 1166.

11 Defendants, as private parties, can neither invoke nor waive the state-secrets
12 privilege—only the government can. See United States v. Reynolds, 345 U.S. at 7-8;
13 Kasza, 133 F.3d at 1165-66. Until the Court decides the Government Motion, Defendants
14 cannot address any facts that may be shielded by the privilege—and the government asserts
15 that the entire subject matter of the case is shielded by the privilege. Dkt. 82, at 4:11-17.

16 This situation is only made worse by the fact that Plaintiffs seek substantial discovery
17 in aid of their motion. Dkt. 94 (seeking to compel discovery); see also Dkt. 103 (opposing 18 discovery). The government’s position is clear: It “requests that discovery proceedings be 19 deferred until the government’s submission has been considered and heard.” Dkt. 82, at 5:12-
20 14. Allowing discovery before the Government Motion is resolved would pocket-veto the 21 government’s request and violate the principles governing the state-secrets privilege.

22 If Plaintiffs really seek their discovery in aid of their preliminary injunction motion, as
23 they say, Dkt. 94, at 1, then the order of business must be: (1) resolve the Government Motion
24 and the other motions to dismiss; (2) resolve the discovery issues; and (3) hear the preliminary
25 injunction motion. Nothing else respects all the interests at stake, and nothing else permits
26 Defendants to present a defense raising anything other than purely legal grounds.
